- A. The Cutty Sark is an English ship that brought tea from China to London in the 1800s. But that's not all she carried. The ship also transported wool from Australia. And she was known for being speedy. Using high wind speeds along the route from Australia, the Cutty Sark set a record time of 73 days for making the journey from Sydney to London. Nowadays the only remaining tea clipper ship from the 19th century, the Cutty Sark, has become a popular museum.
- B. The Royal Yacht Britannia was built specially for Queen Elizabeth II in 1953 and made the Queen the world's most travelling monarch. During its service the yacht made about seven hundred cruises abroad. But when the British Empire lost all of its overseas colonies, Britannia's role became less important. In 1997 the favourite royal yacht was brought to its final resting place in the port of Leith, Edinburgh. Now Britannia is a maritime museum.
- C. HMS Belfast is a World War II cruiser (vessel), which is now situated on the south side of the Thames not far from London Bridge. She was built in 1936 and was a working ship until 1963. Cats were always part of the ship crew. They were kept as pets to make the sailors' life a bit more fun. But the cats' main mission was certainly to protect the ship from mice and they did their job very well!
- D. Ships sometimes sink far away from land. If help doesn't come in time, the sailors and the passengers may die without food and water. In 1953 doctor Alain Bombard conducted an experiment. He crossed the Atlantic Ocean in a small boat. Every day Alain drank a little sea water, ate fish he had caught and small sea plants. His voyage lasted for 65 days, Alain Bombard lost 20 kilos but he showed that people can survive on sea water, fish and sea plants.
- E. In 1577 Sir Francis Drake started his round-the-world voyage on the ship Golden Hind. He returned to England only three years later. The Golden Hind was tied up at Plymouth, a big port on the south coast of England. As a reward, Sir Francis Drake was made mayor of Plymouth. Nowadays Golden Hind is the name of a daily express train from London to Plymouth.
- F. It is unbelievable but true. In 1898 (14 years before the Titanic tragedy), a novel Futility (which means uselessness) was published. It was written by M. Robertson. This novel was about a large ship hitting an iceberg on a cold April night. The ship was called Titan. In 1912 a luxurious cruise ship was built in Ireland. The ship was called Titanic. Both ships — fictional and real — were similar in design and the circumstances of their wreck were remarkably alike.

- G. In 1872, in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean the sailors of the ship Dei Gratia saw another ship Mary Celeste. The ship was not moving. Some sailors from the Dei Gratia climbed onto the Mary Celeste. They looked everywhere on the ship but there was nobody on board. Something had happened while the sailors on the Mary Celeste were eating. There was still food on the table. No one knows what happened to the sailors on the Mary Celeste. No one has ever seen any of them again.

Milne's family

Winnie the Pooh, a famous children's book character, was created by A. A. Milne. After the book was finished, A.A. Milne planned a literary career as a serious dramatist. He worked hard for twenty years and published other novels and essays. Unfortunately, British critics ignored him as a serious writer. For them, as well as for the rest of the audience, A. A. Milne was forever closely connected with his first book.

Meanwhile, the book had a life of its own. Numerous editions broke all records. During Milne's life, seven million copies of Winnie the Pooh were sold. The book was translated into 25 languages and spread round the world. As technology developed, the story was recorded and filmed. Even now, children adore Winnie the Pooh cartoons.

The popularity of Winnie the Pooh was a paradox to Milne. Before his son was born, Milne had never had any intention of writing a book for children. As a brilliant graduate of Westminster school, he had an ambition to become a prestigious journalist and writer.

Life changed with his marriage. In 1920, his wife Dorothy had a son, Christopher Robin. While the boy was growing up his father was busy writing for Punch magazine. He had no time to spend with Christopher Robin. During the lonely hours, the boy talked to his favourite toy, a teddy bear, which was a present from his father. This is how the main character was created.

Its name came from a black Winnipeg bear that Milne once saw in the zoo. The other toys — a kangaroo, a donkey, a piglet and a tiger — also belonged to his son. The Owl and the Rabbit were original creations. But all together they made a nice group of Winnie's friends. An exhibition of the original toys and Milne's family photos was opened in New York. It was popular with visitors of all ages and only Christopher Robin didn't want to see it.

Christopher Robin did not read the book for sixty years after it appeared. Till the end of his life he suffered from having been a famous little boy. At school, teachers admired the star of the best-seller. But his classmates laughed at his habits, so carefully described in the book. He was so shy and sensitive that they could not resist. Changing school and doing boxing did not help, either.

Christopher Robin got a diploma in philology. After graduating from Oxford University, he joined the army and was a brave officer. Newspaper reporters, however, seldom asked him questions about his military service. All they wanted to know were the facts and memories about his family. The same thing happened when he started writing. As a result, he had to write a series of childhood memoirs.

Though Christopher Robin did not receive much fame as a writer, his name is known all over the world. For millions of people he will forever be a cute, happy boy, a character from their favourite books, films, and cartoons.
